we heart paddling!

Stop by the Canoeing.com booth, or go online to grab some paddling love with our signature stickers.

Getting Started: Planning Makes Perfect

We all dream of the perfect trip—sunny, mosquito-free and water as smooth as glass. But even a weekend trip can bring rain, wind and (everyone’s favorite) bugs. There’s a lot to consider when planning a canoe trip, but a few simple questions will get your planning off to the right start:

Choosing a Destination Think about your group size, your combined skill level and your goals. Does your destination limit group size (in the BWCAW the maximum group size is 9)? Is the paddling suitable for the least experienced person in your group? If something went wrong, are you comfortable with the distance to help? Then look for shuttle services and outfitters to help you reach your destination.

Do you need a permit? Certain canoe-friendly areas like the BWCAW and Quetico Provincial Park require permits for entry. And you may need a Remote Area Border Crossing Permit if you’re paddling across international borders.

What to Pack If you’re using an outfitter they’ll provide a list of the gear you’ll need to bring, or check out our guide on page 6. Always remember extra food—appetites grow on the trail—and remember, everything you bring has to fit in a canoe and be carried over a portage. Prioritize your packing choices, and think light!

Canoe Trip FAQs

A few common questions answered courtesy of Sue and Andy Ahrendt from Becoming a Boundary Waters Family www.becomingaboundarywatersfamily.com

How do we get in and out of a canoe?

When shoving off, the person in front should get in first. Likewise, when landing, the person in front should get out first, stabilize or brace the canoe and remove the gear. If you pull the canoe up while a person or gear is still in the boat, the canoe can easily flip.

Can we take the kids canoe camping?

Yes! But they'll need your help, here are a couple of reminders: let kids paddle when they want to (expect them to get tired) and engage them in planning and map reading. Don't forget sunscreen and insect repellent, clothes with long sleeves and pants will help protect from scratches, insect bites and sun. Rain gear (and staying dry) is important – keep one set of clothes dry for emergencies. Always, always wear shoes, even when swimming. Have fun and be flexible, take time to explore together.

What's a portage?

A portage is a well-used, widely traveled path, often with clear people-footprints. If the path is narrow or overgrown, it usually isn't a portage. It may be a "false start" or a "moose path." Don't follow a trail that isn't obvious.

Who should be the navigator?

Everyone! In the evenings, take some time with your whole group to gather around the map and create a travel plan for the next day. Keep a relaxed and forgiving atmosphere so everyone can learn from each other's mistakes.

Why Use an Outfitter?

Outfitters aren't just for beginners. They're the experts on their region, and whether you're new to paddling or planning the annual family vacation, working with an outfitter or guide gives you more than a stress-free trip.

If you're new to canoe tripping, and words like 'portage' and 'duffer' sound like a foreign language, an outfitter will take care of your worries and all the details—route planning, menus and gear lists—at surprisingly cost-effective rates.

And you'll get the inside scoop. Traveling to the BWCAW and want to know what it's like to paddle through the burn area? Outfitters can give you on the ground reports. They can also tell you which portages are hard to find, where the berries are in season and where the observant paddler might catch sight of wildlife.

Check out some of our favorite outfitters and look for the  for Canoeing.com Recommended services!

Last-minute Gear Tips

Sometimes the wilderness throws you a curveball, check all your gear before departure to minimize those self-inflicted surprises.

Camp stoves:

- test the stove (always outside!)
- refill fuel bottles (dump out the old fuel, it doesn't burn well)

Tent check-up:

- a sheet of plastic cut to fit the tent floor and placed underneath will help you stay dry and protect the tent from wear and tear (just make sure to tuck the edges under the tent)
- set up the tent, check all poles and straighten any bent stakes (this is a great team building activity for new groups: setting up the tent without instructions)
- treat exposed tent seams with seam-sealer and lubricate zippers with ski wax

Other gear:

- replace batteries in headlamps, UV pens, etc. always bring an extra set of batteries
- backflush and/or replace water filters
- replace your matches—matchheads soften with age
- restock the first-aid kit
- untangle the lines on your tarp
- sharpen knives, saw, ax blades
- stow digital cameras, devices in waterproof bag or box
- put everything in your pack and try it on for weight
- if your boots are new, break them in before your first portage

THE BOUNDARY WATERS

The Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness (BWCAW) along the Minnesota-Canada border spans 1 million acres with over 1,100 lakes. Since the passage of the BWCA Wilderness Act, this protected region has been preferred by canoeists and is the most popular wilderness area in the country. Even a brief visit promises natural beauty, glimpses of moose, loons, and serene island-studded lakes. From an easy-going day trip to a long and challenging trek, the Boundary Waters has something for every skill level.

There are 59 paddling entry points between Cook, Ely, Tofte, Isabella, and Grand Marais for your BWCAW adventures. Some entry points may change in 2012 as a result of the recent Pagami Creek Fire. Work with an outfitter in the town nearest to your preferred entry point for the most current information and best service.

Voyageurs National Park boasts big water, amazing cliffs, and sapphire lakes — and since it's a national park, you'll find services like visitors' centers and campgrounds. Known for its houseboats, motors are allowed in Voyageurs, but the interior lakes are reserved only for canoes.

Tips for Boundary Waters Trips

- In the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness, motors and visitors are restricted to help protect its unique landscape. Permits are required, and some entry points are so popular that reservations fill up months ahead.
- The Gunflint Trail, Ely, and Grand Marais, are the most popular jump-off points for Boundary Waters trips, but Tofte, Isabella, Cook, Orr, and Crane Lake can offer more opportunities for solitude.
- Can you travel on the Canadian side during a Boundary Waters trip? Yes, but you will need a passport and a remote border crossing permit.
- Canoe tripping is a great way to experience the wilderness, practice low impact camping so it can be enjoyed by future generations.

Getting Your Canoe Ready to Go

Before a big trip it's always a good idea to give your canoe and paddles a thorough "pre-flight" inspection.

- All canoes—tighten thwart and seat bolt nuts.
- Royalex and composite canoe hulls—polish the outside of the hull with a UV sealer but not the inside or it will become dangerously slippery.
- Canoes with wood rails—protect them by first sanding with a fine sand paper and then rubbing in tung oil, thinned with mineral spirits.
- Aluminum canoes—just brush off the snow and you are good to go.
- Wood/canvas canoes—you already know how to take care of your baby; you've had lots of practice.

Tweaking wooden canoe paddles:

- Sand any splinters out of the shaft, then oil or varnish
- Oil the grip
- Touch up the blade with spar varnish

cedar tree,
afterlife.

WOODLAND CARIBOU PROVINCIAL PARK

Ontario's Woodland Caribou Provincial Park is aptly named, for within its 1.2 million acres roams one of the largest herds of woodland caribou south of Hudson Bay. The Bloodvein and the Gammon rivers begin here, before flowing into Atikaki Provincial Park just over the border in Manitoba. The park has several backcountry lodges and camps, and you can spend an entire trip there in total solitude. Woodland Caribou is known for its pictographs: striking reminders of the ancestors of today's Ojibway, people who traveled there thousands of years ago, silently slipping along its waterways and forest corridors, the same way canoeists do today.

Woodland Caribou Park is a roadless haven into which you can paddle or fly, using one of the charter services around Red Lake, Ear Falls, Kenora, and Nestor Falls.

WABAKIMI PROVINCIAL PARK

Also in Ontario, Wabakimi Provincial Park is remote and known for big lakes and spectacular rivers — the Allanwater, Ogoki, Brightsand, and Kopka to name a few. There are lodges and outpost camps, but no roads, so you can paddle in, fly in, or even hop on the Canadian National Railway between Savant Lake and Armstrong. You will quickly be immersed in the isolation and splendor of the Canadian backcountry.

EASTERN MANITOBA

From Nopiming to Atikaki Provincial Wilderness Park, some of Canada's most navigable, and rugged rivers are concentrated in "Le Petit Nord," the section of Manitoba East of Lake Winnipeg. Flatwater paddling abounds, but the region is known for the Bloodvein, a Canadian Heritage River. A lifetime adventure awaits in the vast, undisturbed wilderness of Eastern Manitoba's canoe parks.

You can drive into Nopiming Provincial Park from the towns of Bissett and Lac du Bonnet, it's a very friendly canoe park with campgrounds, lodges and dozens of backcountry campsites.

Before You Rent a Canoe

If you're renting a canoe for a day trip, your outfitter should have it ship-shape. However, if you're embarking on a longer trip:

- Carefully inspect the canoe and ask questions.
- Put the canoe on your shoulders. Make sure the canoe yoke is in the right position and that the pads are comfortable. The canoe should feel slightly stern (back) heavy.
- If you are a kneeler, determine if there is room beneath the seats for your feet—get in the canoe!
- Ask the outfitter to raise seats, reposition the yoke and/or tighten the thwarts and bolt nuts. Get the right fit! You will be spending many hours in and under your canoe.

Choose the right canoe for you:

- Lift two or three different canoes and choose the one that feels best on your shoulders. Your outfitter may have more than one brand and style of canoe to rent.
- Test the canoe on the water—take it for a short paddle.
- Bring your own paddle—with the proper length and handgrip fit.

Less is More

by Rob Kesselring

Canoe trips are adventures, keep them that way. With today's miracle materials, ultralight designs, and miniaturized electronics, it is possible to go into the wilderness with all the comforts of home. But what fun is that? The idea of a wilderness trip is not to replicate home but rather to escape from home. By keeping it simple, you can focus on your surroundings. Don't skimp on what you need to be safe, warm and dry but choose carefully from any gear aimed at just enhancing your comfort. Most of us sit on chairs almost every day but sitting on a fallen log or a wilderness beach is a rare and cherished opportunity. Just because it's on a checklist doesn't mean you need it. Even with all the new technology, many of today's Boundary Waters canoeists carry in more weight than their grandparents did a half-century ago. But it doesn't have to be that way. By packing light you can travel like the wind, blowing through a portage in a single carefree pass. The less you insulate yourself from nature, the more you touch nature and the more nature touches you. Enjoy that wilderness adventure; it will provide a lifetime of memories.
